Faces Places

A road trip through the France you won't see in a travel brochure.

F Project Cinema presents the award winning documentary “Faces Places”, a documentary about Agnes Varda, a 90-year-old film director who goes on the road with young street artist JR to create remarkable, moving public portraits of the people they meet.

The two artists share a passion for images and how they’re created, displayed and shared; exploring the villages and small towns of rural France and meeting its residents – while creating large-scale portraits plastered across unconventional locations.

A Cannes Film Festival award-winner and Academy Award nominee, Faces Places is a deeply charming and life-affirming look at not only the subtle power of community, but the inspiration that comes from the most cross-generational of friendships.
